Welcome!

Introduction

HackHardware is a community of tinkerers, makers, and inventors from Boston University, a top engineering school in the nation. We host beginner-friendly hackathons, events, and workshops to offer students hands-on experience with hardware and software, encouraging innovation, collaboration, and learning beyond the classroom.

About Us

- The first ever HackHardware hackathon was organized on April 11th, 2021. It was incredibly successful for a first-time event, gathering over 100 students from all around Boston.
- This past semester, HackHardware partnered with multiple organizations and labs on campus to successfully host two hackathons and one circuits workshop. From omnidirectional magnetic-armed robots to flying drones, over 80 students gained hands-on experience in electrical, mechanical, and system integration skills.
- Looking ahead, our goal is to expand HackHardware's reach and impact through a semester-long hackathon! We will challenge students to work on high level robotics controls, dynamics sensitivity, and complex motion systems through durable and swift robot mechatronics.

Why Sponsor Us?

- With the support of our sponsors, we hope to provide attendees with the best experience possible, via resources, mentorship opportunities, and hands-on experiences, while offering sponsors early access to our pool of brilliant and talented students
- We're especially excited to work with companies interested in providing hardware samples, development kits, components, or prototyping tools. Sponsors who provide hardware components will receive tier placement equivalent to the estimated retail value of their donation.
